MEADVILLE ARMORY DEDICATED.

In the presence of Governor John K. Tener, Commander-in-Chief, and other distinguished officers of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, the new armory of Company B, Sixteenth Regiment, was recently dedicated under conditions which provided a red letter day for the patriotic citizens of Meadville. The armory realized a long cherished dream of the company and its satisfaction in obtaining the improved quarters is shared by its many friends throughout the Guard. The Meadville company is one of the most efficient in the State, and its zeal for the service has long since won it particular distinction.

The arrangements for the dedication had been well prepared in advance and the exercises proceeded without a hitch. Governor Tener arrived at Meadville late in the afternoon. A local committee, consisting of Mayor F. M. Graff, Mayor-elect John E. Reynolds, Postmaster H. M. Dickson, Hon. C. Victor Johnson, Fred G. Prenatt, Hon. A. L. Bates, had met the Governor at Greenville and escorted him to the city. A large crowd greeted him upon his arrival at the Erie depot, from which station he was taken to the Lafayette Hotel, where he and his party were guests at a dinner. The doors of the new armory opened promptly at 7.45 o'clock, and the large auditorium was quickly filled, so keen was the desire of the public to attend the history-recording ceremonies.

A half hour later, the large assemblage was called to order by Captain Wesley B. Best, the director of ceremonies. Hon. Thomas J. Prather, acting in behalf of the architect and the Chamber of Commerce, then proceeded to turn over the handsome new building to the State Armory Board. General A. J. Logan, commanding the Second Brigade, following, received the armory, and in turn presented it to Governor Tener.

The Commander-in-Chief, in turning the building over to Captain Clyde, said:

"Never since I have been Governor of this State has such a warm reception been given me in any city of the State I have visited, as has been tendered me and Mrs. Tener this evening. We heartily thank the people of Meadville for it. You have greatly honored me and I believe it is because I brought Mrs. Tener with me. All good citizens are interested in the National Guard. I congratulate you on your action and evidence of willingness to stand by the organization. Company B, of the Sixteenth Regiment, is all right."

The formalities then concluded with an address by Captain Charles F. Clyde accepting the building on behalf of the company.

Following the exercises, a reception was tendered to Governor Tener, after which there was a grand march beginning a great military ball, with refreshments served later in the evening.

Among the distinguished guests present were: General Albert J. Logan, Colonel George C. Rickards, Major Marshall L. Henderson, Hon. Ralph Downs, Captain J. A. Kennedy, Lieutenant L. J. Phelps, Lieutenant Floyd Hill, Lieutenant M. H. Mizener, Lieutenant Charles Hamilton, Lieutenant McCoy, Lieutenant Ruffing, Dr. R. A Thompson, Captain R. D. Burtner, Lieutenant Holt, Captain J. F Austin, Captain E. G. Wilson, Captain E. E. Grimm, Dr. J. H. Martin, Major Marshall Phipps, Captain C. B. Long, Lieutenant Philip Webster, Lieut. Nelson, Capt. F. D. Meadville was gaily attired for the occasion, and the citizens generally heartily co-operated in making the affair a notable one. Mayor F. M. Graff, fully alive to the importance of the celebration, issued the following proclamation:

Whereas, Thursday, November 13, has been set aside for the dedication of the armory for Company B, Sixteenth Infantry, National Guard of Pennsylvania; and

Whereas, The City of Meadville is to be honored on that occasion by the presence of the Governor of the Commonwealth, members of his staff, and many distinguished citizens from various parts of the State; and,

Whereas, This occasion will be memorable in the social and civic life of the city and deserves the united support of all the people to make it a complete success, now, therefore, I, Francis M. Graff, Mayor of the city of Meadville, by virtue of the authority in me vested, do hereby make proclamation as follows:

That all citizens unite in doing honor to his Excellency, the Governor, and the distinguished guests of the city.

That as far as possible, citizens show their appreciation of the splendid armory building by honoring the dedicatory services with their presence.

That all places of business and all citizens illuminate their buildings and homes at least until 12 o'clock on the night of the 13th and that there be a generous display of flags and other suitable decorations during the day.

Given under my hand and seal of the city of Meadville this 10th day of November, A. D. 1913.

F. M. GRAFF, Mayor.

Company B, Sixteenth Regiment, was originally organized and uniformed as a zouave company by Captain Thomas A. Stebbins, in 1868. Captain Stebbins was a veteran of the Civil War and a good soldier, and his enthusiasm at once made the Meadville Zouaves one of the best military organizations of its day in the State. The company continued as a zouave organization until shortly before the riots of '77, when the name was changed to the Meadville Light Guard. Captain Henry C. Clark was then in command and the uniform was changed to that of the regular infantry. Up to this time and all through the command of Captain Clark the command was distinguished as one of the very few in the State that was efficient in the bayonet drill. The company was put through the entire manual of arms regularly weekly, going through the entire drill without a word of command.

Following Captain Clark, the company was commanded in the order named by James W. Curry, Captain Thomas A. Stebbins, (called back to the command by unanimous vote of the company), Harold S. Phillips, Wesley B. Best, Frank C. Baker, R. Bruce Gamble and Charles F. Clyde, the latter now in command. The company served in the riots of 1877, in the Homstead strike trouble, and in the Spanish-American War. In its original organization the company was independent, but soon afterwards was taken into the service of the State, and in the old days of the Guard was a part of the Fifteenth Regiment, Twentieth Division, under command of General H. S. Hudekoper. Later it was for a time in the Seventeenth Regiment, then in the Sixteenth, and back later to the Fifteenth, and finally landed permanently, on the disbandment of the Fifteenth, after the Spanish-American War, into the Sixteenth. Of its officers, Captain Clark became Lieutenant Colonel of the Sixteenth, Captain Stebbins became Lieutenant Colonel of the Fifteenth, Captain Baker became Lieutenant Colonel of the Sixteenth, and Captain Gamble became Major of the Sixteenth Regiment. Of the former captains of the company, five are still living in Meadville: Captains Stebbins, Phillips, Best, Baker and Gamble.

An interesting pamphlet has just been published reciting in brief the history of the Demuth Tobacco Shop, which for almost a century and a half has been an institution at Lancaster. The business has continued uninterrupted in the same family throughout that period. The Demuth family, incidentally, has always been deeply interested in the military service, and quite a number of its members have served the cause. At the present time one of the younger generation is preparing to enter the West Point Military Academy, where he will assume the duties of an officer of the regular establishment.

AN EXAMPLE FOR PENNSYLVANIA.

At this time, when the charges that New York is un-American in its spirit and to all intents and purposes a foreign town, are being heralded throughout the country, and accepted on their face value by many of our citizens, the Journal wishes to call public attention to the worthy lead taken by the Chamber of Commerce of that city towards stimulating interest in the National Guard of that State. The patriotic example set forth by that great commercial body could well be followed by similar organizations of this State. The New York Chamber of Commerce has made a detailed study of the conditions confronting the militia in that city and State, and, it must be said, has found that the difficulties of securing enlistments and of arousing interest in the Guard are almost identical with those which prevail in Pennsylvania. The New Yorkers have, however, gone to the very roots of the problem, in the hope of a solution, and are now endeavoring to secure the co-operation of employers, in order that there will be more response to recruiting, and that there be a better appreciation of the organized militia. The report of a special committee which investigated the New York conditions was unanimously approved this month, as have likewise several resolutions pledging the support of the Chamber in the interest of the Guard. It is now up to the commercial bodies of Pennsylvania to do likewise.

Owing to the importance of the step taken by the New York organization, we reproduce the report of the special committee in its entirety. This communication follows:

This committee was appointed by a resolution of the Chamber passed on February 1, 1912, as follows:

> "Resolved, That the President of the Chamber be authorized to appoint a committee of seven, to be known as the Committee on the National Guard and Naval Militia, with instructions to report to the Chamber such recommendations as may seem fit and proper."

After organizing, the committee decided upon a plan of procedure, the first step in which was to issue circular letters to the Commanding Officers of the National Guard and Naval Militia of the State of New York asking for certain specific information.

From the answers received, it was apparent that recruiting has been more difficult in recent years; that the amount of time required of the enlisted man (necessitating his absence from business) did not exceed fourteen days in each year, including two Saturdays and two Sundays, and that an annual tour of duty in camp or in the field was not only beneficial, from the standpoint of giving the enlisted man an idea of life under conditions of actual service, but necessary, if the highest standard of volunteer military perfection was to be approximated.

Out of twenty-nine answers received from Commanding Officers of the National Guard and Naval Militia only four stated that the opposition of Labor Unions interfered with recruiting, eight alleged the indifference of young men of suitable age, one cited the control of the Federal Government as a deterrent factor and thirteen found that the difficulty lay in the objection of employers.

The average annual earnings of the enlisted man appear to be about $1250.00, and the average cost of belonging to an organization in the National Guard or Naval Militia about $14.00 a year.

Employers Unfavorable.

Nine Commanding Officers found the attitude of employers distinctly unfavorable and the remainder found them either favorable or neutral, on the question as to whether or not their employees should be members of the National Guard or Naval Militia.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS, COMPANY B, SIXTEENTH INFANTRY.
"The Back-bone of the Army is the non-commissioned man."—Kipling.

The plan of the committee also included the sending of circular letters to members of the Chamber of Commerce and to a selected list of other large employers of labor and clerical help. About 1600 letters were sent out and only 491 answers were received, which fact, in the opinion of the committee, in itself, shows indifference to the subject.

The answers received were from employers who had a total of over 48,000 men between the ages of 18 and 28 on their pay rolls. Of this total number only 1,335, or under 3 per cent., were found to be active members of the National Guard or Naval Militia, and 197 were ex-members. These figures, however, are misleading, because, although the head officers of the concerns making answers are situated in the City or State of New York, in some instances their employees are located outside of the State and in other instances employees, although coming to work in New York, live in adjacent States. However, it has been found impossible to get more accurate statistics in this matter without putting the members of the Chamber and others to whom inquiries would be addressed to an amount of trouble and expense that the committee does not feel itself warranted in insisting upon. From other statistics at the service of the committee, it is apparent that 3 per cent. fairly represents the average number of employees located in the State of New York, eligible for military or naval service, who are members of the National Guard or Naval Militia.

Young Men Indifferent.

The committee were interested to learn from the answers of employers that most of the young men who were questioned appeared to be wholly indifferent as to whether they served the State or not, and that only ninety-nine out of four hundred and ninety-one employers did not deduct the time spent in military service from their employees' vacations, although two frankly stated that they were opposed to employing enlisted men. Forty-eight firms expressed themselves as much in favor of having their employees join the National Guard or Naval Militia and twenty favored joining, but were afraid that the service would interfere too much with their business employment.

The tabulation of the answers to these circular letters having been completed, the committee held several sessions at which officers of the National Guard and Naval Militia appeared and expressed their views on the general situation. The points of view of the employer and the enlisted man were fully brought out and discussed. One meeting was held at which the newspapers of the city were represented and promised to aid in the collection and dissemination of information on this subject, being convinced that the maintenance of the State military forces is of very much greater importance than appears at first sight.

The questions developed by the investigation of the committee are very broad, although not perhaps beyond the scope of the resolution. However, it may suffice to say that they include a consideration of the position of the National Guard and Naval Militia in the national defense and of the advantages and disadvantages of the act passed by Congress in 1903, commonly known as the "Dick Law," which relates only to the organization and employment of the National Guard, but which it has been proposed to extend to the Naval Militia. The question also of the employment of the volunteer forces in the maintenance of order in the case of strikes and other labor troubles has come up for consideration, with its corollary proposition, that is, the organization of a State Constabulary. Both of these questions have to be studied in an attempt to find the answer for the difficulty in recruiting, but they go beyond the lines of the State and are perhaps more appropriate subjects for solution by a national body. In order, however, to explain the conclusions of the committee, it is necessary to give a brief statement of present conditions.

In this State to-day, with a population of 9,113,614, there is an organized National Guard of 16,478 officers and men, divided into four brigades comprising thirteen regiments of infantry, one regiment and one squadron of cavalry, three regiments of coast artillery, two regiments of field artillery, one regiment of engineers, two companies of signal corps, two field hospitals, three ambulance companies, and staff departments, comprising in all one military division. There are also 1,140 officers and men in the Naval Militia, divided into three battalions.

There is no State Constabulary, although there is a force of "Aqueduct Police," organized to patrol and preserve order along the line of the Catskill Aqueduct now under construction, consisting of 281 officers and men. There are, of course, the uniformed police in the various municipalities of the State, consisting in the City of New York of 10,373 officers and men.

The only organization directly controlled by the United States Government is the National Guard, which is subject to the provisions of the Act of Congress of 1903, amended in 1908 and 1910; the so-called "Dick Law." Before the passage of that law the Militia, in accordance with the Act of 1792, could be organized in such manner as the legislature of each State might prescribe. The "Dick Law" requires that the organization, armament and discipline of the National Guard shall be the same as that prescribed for the Regular Army of the United States, subject, in time of peace, to such general exceptions as may be authorized by the Secretary of War. The limitation in the Act of 1792, that the Militia could only be called into the service of the United States for a period of not exceeding nine months, was superseded by the provision in the present law, that such call may be for a term to be specified by the President, provided that no officer or enlisted man shall be held in the United States service beyond the time of his commission or enlistment. The "Dick Law" also contains a statement that the Militia may be called upon by the President to serve either "within or without the territory of the United States." As to this provision, however, it should be noted that the Attorney General of the United States has held that the President has no power to send the Militia into a foreign country with the Regular Army, as part of an army of occupation and that the constitutional use of the Militia is to suppress insurrections, repel invasions, or execute the laws of the union. The repelling of invasions might require that the Militia should temporarily cross the border in pursuit of a retreating enemy, but would not justify its being beyond the border under other conditions. This statement of the limitations of the "Dick Law" is important, because they are not generally understood, and the committee is convinced that a misunderstanding of them has had its effect on recruiting.

The general situation to-day is that the Congress of the United States, which is presumed to fairly represent the feeling of the people at large, has only authorized the maintenance of a small standing army and that if that army should be sent abroad its place must, of necessity, immediately be filled by calling into the service of the United States the National Guard forces of the various States for the defense of our sea coasts and borders. This situation would put the responsibility of the maintenance of order in the State of New York upon the Municipal Police.

The Naval Militia is not subject to the control of the United States Government in the same manner as the National Guard, no legislation similar to the "Dick Law" having been passed by Congress with regard to it, and it is still subject to the provisions of the Act of 1792 as far as they apply. In case of war, if the procedure established in 1898 should be followed, the Naval Militia could be called into the service of the United States as individuals for a term of enlistment not to exceed nine months and to service anywhere, afloat or ashore, that the exigencies of the occasion demanded.

It would seem that there is wisdom in the course pursued by several of the States in the establishment of a State Constabulary, which to a great extent relieves the National Guard and Naval Militia from guarding property in case of strikes and other labor troubles. Moreover this Constabulary would be susceptible of quick expansion, in case the National Guard should be called out of the State or mobilized in one part of the State, (as its sea coast,) in time of war.

Value of Service.

As conditions exist to-day, however, from the standpoint of security of property, your committee believes that the National Guard and Naval Militia should be recruited to their full strength and should be maintained at a high degree of efficiency. There is another questioon, beside the security of property, to which the committee desires to urge the attention of the Chamber and that is the marked and beneficial effect upon young men of serving in one of the State military organizations. Such service emphasizes the value of qualities that are not only helpful in business life but which tend to better citizenship. It develops such characteristics as respect for duly constituted authority, disobedience of superiors, fair treatment and courtesy to those in inferior positions, punctuality, regularity of habits and good physical conditions. These are matters which make a man worth more to his employers and are opposed to every lawless and degenerating tendency. The manner, the bearing, the deportment and steadiness of a young man are all improved by service in one of the military organizations of the State, as they are conducted to-day. The committee has been given the opportunity of inspecting various regiments and battalions and observing their activities not only on the drill floor but in their company rooms and social life, and it is very favorably impressed with the conditions shown.

Employers should be given better opportunities of seeing for themselves that the equipment of the State armories and the class of men frequenting them make them the best places of general recreation for young men to spend their evenings. Practically all the armories are supplied with gymnasiums, shooting galleries, baths, bowling alleys, libraries and billiard tables. In connection with most of the organizations there are athletic associations and rifle teams. There are also clubs for those who are interested in fencing, tennis, theatricals, etc., in other words, the normal forms of amusement are provided for, in a reasonable and inexpensive way, through agencies organized and supported by the enlisted men themselves.

Granting that the committee is right in its conclusion that it is to the benefit of the public at large and to the employer as well as to the employee, that the National Guard and Naval Militia should be and remain popular and well recruited, the main question is how to remove the present objections to recruiting and accomplish the object desired.

No single recommendation can be framed to cover the situation and the solution of the question is not in the hands of any one class of individuals. Like almost every question of our complex modern life, it needs co-operation to bring about a result.

Employers at Fault.

This committee finds, in the first place, that the slackness in recruiting is due principally to the indifference of young men of eligible age and that the cause of this is the absence of interest of the employer, which exists largely on account of his lack of information as to the objects and requirements of military service and the advantages to himself of these training schools for young men.

This committee makes the general suggestion, that the employer and employee should be brought to a better understanding concerning the National Guard and Naval Militia, first, by the newspapers, and secondly, by the officers of these organizations exerting themselves more to the end that employers of enlisted men and employers of possible recruits should have a better knowledge of the requirements of the service and the advantages to the employers.

In this connection the committee highly commends what has been done by the Second Naval Battalion of the State of New York toward acquainting the business men of Brooklyn with its organization and work, and recommends that the co-operation of other business and commercial bodies in the State be invited to secure a closer understanding by the employers of other communities of the needs and aims of their local military organizations.

The question of military service is closely related to that of the performance of jury duty, for the reason that active service in the National Guard or Naval Militia exempts a man from jury duty during the period of such service, and, furthermore, the possession of a "full and honorable discharge," showing five years' service in either the National Guard or Naval Militia, exempts a man from jury duty for life. The greater part of the kind of military service that interferes with business, comes annually in the summer time, when business is dull, whereas jury duty comes in one of the other seasons and often at the busiest time of the year. If the performance of jury duty was made as obligatory as that of military duty and the disregard of it entailed similar penalties, the advantage of belonging to the National Guard or Naval Militia would at once be apparent. It is a pity that the three great functions of a citizen of a Republic, that is to say, casting the ballot, serving on juries and serving with the colors, are not made in some manner interdependent. As a matter of fact, while a maximum number of citizens cast the ballot, a much smaller number serve on juries and a smaller number again give military service to the State. It would seem that the citizen who exercises the first named privilege should perform one or the other of the duties of citizenship.

In view of the fact that both the National Guard and Naval Militia have the most honorable traditions and have rendered the State and nation valuable services in the past, and must be relied upon in critical times in the future, this committee makes the following recommendations:

Recommendations.

First: That the members of this Chamber be requested to see to it that the various corporations or firms with which they are respectively connected adopt substantially the following declaration (either in the form of a resolution of the Board of Directors or otherwise,) viz.:

> "Every employee who is now, or will become, a member of the National Guard or Naval Militia, will be allowed during the terms of his enlistment, but not to exceed five years, fourteen days in each year for the performance of military duty, without deduction of pay, and this time will not be charged against his vacation. It is our intention to favor the promotion of men who have secured full and honorable discharges from the National Guard or Naval Militia, or who are in course of earning them by military service. All heads of departments, superintendents and foremen will see to it that the spirit of this declaration is carried out and will encourage the men under them to join the National Guard or Naval Militia to the extend of five per cent. of the working force of any department, shop or unit of organization, as the case may be."

Second: That the National and State Governments be requested to urge their employees to join one or the other of the various organizations in the National Guard and Naval Militia, making arrangements to the end that the standing and pay of the employees so joining shall not be affected by the requirements of military service, and that appropriate legislation be enacted giving preference in the civil service to applicants who are members or who have been honorably discharged from the National Guard or Naval Militia.

Third: That the Secretary of War be requested to see to it that in maneuvers or drills which require the participation of organizations of the National Guard or Naval Militia, the entire National Guard or Naval Militia of any city shall not be called out at one time, so that no employer shall find all of those of his employess who are in the State service necessarily absent at the same time.

Fourth: That the Chamber appoint a special committee which shall have charge of carrying out the recommendations of this committee and of bringing about a better understanding between employers and employees in this State with regard to the National Guard and Naval Militia, to the end that these branches of the military service of the State should be maintained at full strength, together with a standard of high efficiency, in the interest of public peace and order.

The committee herewith submits a form of resolution for the consideration of the Chamber.

At the beginning of the year, Mr. Samuel Rea resigned from the committee on account of his business engagements, and Mr. Anson W. Burchard was appointed in his place.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Much interest is being taken throughout the State, and particularly in the historic Wyoming Valley, in the arrangements now under way for the dedication of the Fort Wilkes-Barre monument, in the public square, at Wilkes-Barre, on July 3 next. The tablet has already been placed and members of the erection committee have expressed themselves as well pleased with the work. Burr C. Miller was the designer of the tablet and McCormick and French designed the monument.

WHY THE GUARDSMAN LIKES THE WAR GAME.

(By Captain David B. Simpson, Commissary, First Infantry N. G. P.)

Every year brings added interest in the war game as it is played by the National Guardsman. It matters not whether he plays it at combined army-militia maneuvers or in his own State at the camps of brigades or auxiliary troops.

The long troop trains which carry soldiers to their home stations every summer, in their dirty uniforms after a week or ten days' service in the field working under warlike conditions, have within them hundreds of citizen soldiers looking a little the worse for the wear, but all happy and satisfied. The officers and men in these trains possess a spirit of whole-souled satisfaction, with the way in which they now spend their summer camps, when they recall the camps of bygone days, where the monotonous close order company, battalion regimental drills, and those famous parades and reviews consumed the allotted time of the State encampments.

Time has changed the system in Pennsylvania, and I venture to say, were it not for the annual State inspection in camp, and with the exception of the daily guard mounting, ceremonies would be few and far between.

A Guardsman of to-day becomes a student of the modern military game immediately upon enlistment. He is taught the fundamentals of the Infantry Drill Regulations, but before he gets in his first camp he knows something about map reading and patrolling, in theory at least. It does not matter whether a man has attended the maneuvers where the regulars and militia are combined, or if his only experience has been at the National Guard of Pennsylvania camps, he seems to enjoy the maneuvers immensely.

Since the Spanish-American War, we have seen the war game improve, and those who have played it have used their time to good advantage. It is the nearest thing to war that we can get and when a problem is entered into, we all know that there is that do or die spirit with both officers and men. (I saw this forcibly demonstrated at Mt. Gretna last summer, when the Third Infantry was defending a convoy).

At our summer camps, when the men know that a problem is to be worked out, or they learn that their command is to go out and bivouac for the night, with the prospects of a fight the next day, excitement runs high. The men are keen for the training. After an all night bivouac I have seen them tumble out of their blankets at reveille and the men who have been on outpost all night, without sleep, join their commands and get into the problem with a determined spirit that is typical of the American soldier.

It does not matter whether the morning is the hottest of the season. Under blazing sun, over fields, through streams and tangled underbrush these men will "hike." Hoofs of horses and the feet of the marching men may sink into the deep clinging soft dust of the country roads. Clouds of dust may sweep the parched country like the smoke of batteries of artillery in action, but the "Reds" or "Blues" never falter.

Once contact is gained, the real worth of the war game as it appeals to the enlisted man can be seen at an instant glance.

Having acted as a newspaper correspondent at the army maneuvers and also as an umpire at some of our State camps, I have noticed the greatest tension exists, as we see troops advancing through the thick wilderness, then they rush to certain points to intercept the "enemy." We see the race of the opposing "armies." Horses covered with foam go crashing through the underbrush and mile after mile they cover guided by the hands of troopers in blinding dust and tortured by heat and thirst. Scouts and flankers are seen following in the traces of the various patrolling parties, we see men of both sides scattered everywhere through the wilderness all eager to exchange shots.

Usually as the point of the advance guard gains contact with the "enemy" the crucial moment arrives. The information is flashed back to the commander of either side by relays, and the observer can then realize "why the National Guardsman likes maneuvers." From that time until the chief umpire has "recall" sounded there is something doing every minute. It is the desire of every enlisted man that carries the rifle to get into action, whether it is in a frontal or flank attack, his sole ambition in maneuvers is to do something. This, I believe, is why the maneuvers are popular with the enlisted men.

Ever since the War Department tried the plan of training the Organized Militia with the regulars in combined maneuvers, the advancement in field service work by the National Guard has been wonderful. It was first thought that this kind of work would prove disastrous on account of the "physical softness" of the Guardsmen. The general staff of the army in arranging its problems for maneuvers overcomes any chance of the militiaman becoming physically incapacitated. It matters not whether the soldiers come from the plough or the office, they get the same kind of work in a methodical manner, that they do not realize how hard they are working. From day to day they become harder and better fitted for the strain. Its graduation from company to battalion, battalion to regimental, and regimental to brigade problems, is carried on in such a machine-like manner that it permits all who engage in the problems to proportionately profit by the scheme.

Our men like the war game, not because it teaches them to construct a camp with every known sanitary precaution, but makes them self-reliant and ofttimes gives an intelligent non-commissioned officer a chance to work on his own initiative. The interest that they have displayed in maneuvers is a revelation to many of the army officers who have been with them acting as inspectors and observers. This is proven by the reports now in the possession of every regimental commander, from the respective army officers that were with them either at Mt. Gretna, Selinsgrove or Erie camps last summer.

Supply departments have benefited by these maneuvers. Greater experience is gained every year. Many organizations in going to camp are reducing their equipment to the weight allowed by Field Service Regulations. The old custom of purchasing extra rations is gradually being eliminated, and many of the units of the infantry regiments subsist entirely on the ration supplied by the State.

The sacrifices made by the enlisted men of the National Guard of Pennsylvania (using those of the First Brigade as an example) at schools during the winter months in order to play their part in the game at the summer camps, and giving up their vacations in many instances to attend the camps, gives the service intelligent men that make themselves efficient adjuncts to their commands. The soldiers themselves return home satisfied with their tour of duty, and are better and stronger men mentally, physcially and morally.

COMMENTS.

The suggested plan of Brigadier General William G. Price, Jr., for the reorganization of the National Guard, published in the November issue of The Journal, attracted great interest throughout the State. Many interesting comments have developed as a result of the numerous discussions.

Colonel Caldwell K. Biddle, of the Third Infantry, stated that he was a firm believer in Federal control of the organized militia, and believed that the tendency in that direction was becoming more and more emphatic every day. Colonel Biddle further declared that a full complement of artillery was an absolute necessity. "We have got to have artillery," said Colonel Biddle. "You cannot emphasize this too strongly."

"I am in hearty accord with Brigadier General W. G. Price in his suggested plan for the reorganization of the Pennsylvania National Guard, to establish it so that it will meet the demand of Circular No. 8, Department of Militia Affairs," declared Captain William T. Rees, of Light Field Battery B.

"I believe that few if any officers in this State would permit personal aggrandizement to interfere with a free and full compliance of Circular No. 8; but we all know that what prevents this State from having the well balanced and efficient division, organized to the standard laid down by the War Department, is the lack of proper backing from the legislative portion of our Government with sufficient appropriations, which is the same reason that they cannot bring the army to the standard they set for the Guard.

"If additional batteries are organized or transferred from other arms, and then equipped, the Federal Government will follow such equipment with a demand for proper housing and maintenance, and that is the impediment that actually interferes with the realization of the demands made in this Circular No. 8, for our legislature does not meet for thirteen months, and when it does can the officers of the Guard assure the War Department that the monies will be forthcoming? No more than the officers of the army can assure us that Congress will surely appropriate certain sums for the army.

"From a local standpoint, admitting that the Fourteenth Infantry were made a regiment of field artillery, with my command as one of the units, I believe that our County Commissioners would buy the necessary additional ground for four or five more batteries, which, fortunately is available, adjoining the present battery property, on which gun sheds would have to be erected at once at a cost of not less than sixteen thousand dollars each, or a total of eighty thousand dollars, which would take care of the regiment for a few years at least without further expenditure.

"Personally, I want to see our State get more field artillery, as my experience has assured me that it takes more work, time and study to develop even passable efficiency than any other branch of the service, and I would welcome such an augment as General Price suggests by taking my battery into such a regiment, and give the Colonel, his officers and the enlisted men the benefit of any instruction or experience that my twenty-three years of service may qualify me to render without thought of reward or advancement, but with the efficiency of the Guard as a whole my sole desire."

EDITORIAL.

The National Guard Association of Pennsylvania is to be congratulated upon its unanimous decision to hold its next convention at Pittsburgh. It is an excellent idea to have these meetings take place in different sections of the State, instead of holding the gatherings in a particular city year in and year out. By varying the place of meeting, the conventions serve to interest the citizens of every section in the affairs of the Guard, and are thus of distinct advantage to the Commonwealth. The Fourteenth Infantry led the recent movement to secure the convention for Pittsburgh, and the regiment has promised that a unique program of entertainment after the business sessions will be provided for the delegates. Pittsburgh is an interesting city to visit under any conditions, and with the officers of its military organizations striving in their well-known energetic manner to assure a good time, out of the ordinary, the next convention of the association should be one of the very best attended in its long history.

NOTES

Major Henry H. Doan, Medical Corps, N. G. P., has called our attention to a typographical error which occurred in his article entitled "Medicine's Contribution to Military Efficiency," printed in the November issue of this journal. The immunity from typhoid fever after the administration of the prophylactic lasts but two years and six months, not twenty years and six months, as was inadvertently printed.

The project for the erection of a new armory for Companies B and D, Fourth Infantry, and for regimental headquarters, at Allentown, has received a temporary setback, as it has been discovered by the new municipal commission that the proposed site at Ninth and Lumber streets is on the city plan for the opening of several streets. It is expected that, in consequence, another site will be secured from the city upon the property formerly used by the Muhlenberg University. The new location is, if anything, much more desirable than the old site, and a handsome new building in this central section of the city would prove a popular move with the citizens.

National Guard officers who attended the recent convention at Philadelphia have suggested that the practice of fire companies in many of the towns and cities would be well followed as a way of means of providing mounted service for the proposed field batteries in a most economical manner. As is well known, the horses for these fire companies do not remain idle in their stalls, when not on actual duty, but are utilized for the commercial purposes, and are drafted for the municipal service as needed. This plan could be applied with even more ease to the maintenance of field artillery, cavalry, and signal service, for these organizations would assemble only at schedule periods, and there would be no hurry calls for the equines. In cases of emergency, emregency measures would be resorted to. The caretakers for the horses should be enrolled men, who would thus provide a nucleus for the organizations.

For infants, the two new infantry companies mustered in at Stroudsburg and Moscow are doing mighty well, and husky for their age. Though baby companies, they have already reached their maximum strength. The Stroudsburg company, which is commanded by Captain Dunning, is known as Company G, Thirteenth Infantry. The Moscow company will probably be officially designated as Company M, Thirteenth Infantry. Captain Kingsbury is its commander. The two companies give the Thirteenth Regiment its full complement for the present, but it is expected that Company I, located at Easton, will be transferred to the Fourth Infantry, as Company L, of that command.

Among the veterans of the Civil War, who are still in active service, are Adjutant General Thomas J. Stewart, Surgeon General Joseph K. Weaver, Commissary General Horace L. Haldeman, General Inspector of Small Arms Practice Colonel Frank K. Patterson, Chaplain Henry A. F. Hoyt, Sixth Regiment, and among the enlisted men, Sergeant Voorhees, of Company G, Second Regiment; Regimental Commissary Sergeant Anderson, of the Tenth Infantry, and Quartermaster Sergeant Kunkle, of Company F, Eighth Infantry.

Major General C. Bow Dougherty has detailed Surgeon-in-Chief Lieutenant Colonel Andrew S. Stayer to organize a commission to study means for further developing the efficiency of the Medical Corps of the State. It is General Dougherty's plan to make this department one of the most serviceable of the Guard. The commission which will study the problems of the corps consists of Major Henry H. Doan, as executive officer, who will be temporarily detached from the Third Infantry; Major Herbert A. Arnold, Sixth Infantry, and Captain Fred O. Waage, of the First Infantry. The commission will plan a special course of instruction for the officers of the Medical Corps. They will include approximately fifty different topics.

It is generally believed that General William G. Price, Jr., commanding First Brigade, is in a receptive mood to take up artillery work in the proposed reorganization of the Guard.

Colonel Howard S. Williams, Chief of Ordnance, is also mentioned as being keenly interested in the proposed artillery organization, and would probably take a prominent position in one of the regiments.

Company K, of the Fourth Infantry, located at Lancaster, will, early in the new year, present a play at one of the leading theatres of that city, with at least seventy-five people in the cast. This entertainment will be under the management of Lieutenant George Hook. It is expected that the affair will be a great success.

Colonel Archibald Holden, of West Chester, who served on the staff of the late Governor Pattison, is deeply interested in the armory project for that borough. It is expected that Colonel Holden will be named as a member of the citizens' committee to further the plans for the improved quarters.

The recent death of Captain Harry F. Davis, for years active in the affairs of the Dequesne Greys, Eighteenth Infantry, has caused much regret, particularly among the older members of the National Guard. Captain Davis was associated with the regiment for fifteen years, and was placed upon the retired list at his own request in 1896. During the riots at Mt. Pleasant, in 1891, he served as Regimental Adjutant under Colonel Norman Smith. During the riots at Homestead, he served for six weeks. Mr. Davis wrote requesting the Government to transfer him from the retired to active list when the Spanish War was declared. The Eighteenth Regiment was to be increased from eight to twelve companies, and Mr. Davis was appointed commander of one of these. He served with the Eighteenth Regiment during the anthracite riots in 1903.

Major Thomas J. Dickson, Sixth Field Artillery, U. S. Army, has completed a series of very instructive lectures on "The Mobile Army of the United States," delivered in the larger cities of the State. The addresses were illustrated by means of moving pictures showing rifle shooting and field maneuvers of the regular establishment. Great crowds attended the lectures, and the wish is general that Major Dickson may visit the Keystone State again in the near future.

The many friends of Major R. Bruce Gamble, Sixteenth Infantry, who has been seriously ill at his home in Meadville, will be glad to hear he has rallied, and seems to be on the road to recovery. Owing to the weakened condition of Major Gamble, it will be several months before he will be able to resume active duties.

"Atkins," said the sergeant angrily, "why haven't you shaved this morning?"

"Ain't I shaved?" asked Atkins, in apparent surprise.

"No, you're not!" insisted the sergeant. "And I want to know why."

"Well, you see, sergeant," replied the soldier, "there was a dozen of us using the same mirror, and I must have shaved some other man."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

COMMENTS.

"I have no criticisms nor suggestions to make in relation to General Price's article," stated Brigadier General Charles M. Clement, commanding Third Brigade.

"I do not desire to make any comment on the article as I believe that it will take legislation before anything can be done," declared Colonel Joseph B. Hutchinson, commanding Eighth Infantry.

Captain Ralph W. Knowles, Adjutant Sixth Infantry, said that he was heartily in accord with this plan for reorganization, and was prepared to take up the artillery branch at any time.

A prominent officer of the Twelfth Infantry said that a number of the officers of that regiment had discussed the article by General Price and believed that a very good field battery could be organized from the two present infantry companies at Sunbury. He also suggested that Lewisburg, being a college town, could support a splendid troop of cavalry. Bellefonte, he said, would also prove an excellent location for another troop, and further suggested that the new infantry company at Bloomsburg be assigned to the Thirteenth Infantry. This latter addition, together with the new Moscow company, would give that regiment its full complement of companies. The Lewistown company, he suggested, could be assigned to the Eighth Regiment, and complete that command.

Colonel William S. McKee, of the Fourteenth Infantry, stated that he was in complete accord with the plan outlined by General Price, and declared that the article should be given the greatest consideration by the State military authorities.

"I think the matter is up to the Adjutant General and he only carry out the provisions of the Act of Assembly of Pennsylvania," said Brigadier General James B. Coryell, commanding Fourth Brigade.

Colonel George C. Rickard, commanding Sixteenth Infantry, makes the following comment upon the suggested reorganization of the Guard:

"We have an Adjutant General's Department in Pennsylvania equalled only, in my opinion, by that of the general government. I know of no one better qualified to make this reorganization than this department and have no doubt that it has had careful and serious thought by that most competent officer who we recognize as the head, heart and hand of Pennsylvania's soldiery and who is in close touch with every detail of the present organization.

"The Adjutant General has not yet honored me with a request or detail to solve this problem or to aid in its solution. Should I be so honored I will gladly enter into the work heart and soul. Until that time I do not feel called upon to give advice in a matter that I know has been given the consideration that this question has by the proper department.

"That the National Guard of Pennsylvania should be reorganized to form a complete division there is no question in the mind of any who have given it a thought. What units of the present organization should be changed to conform therewith is a most serious question, and one that can, I believe, be best determined by the Chief of Staff, in whose ability we all repose the utmost confidence.

"'Pipe dreams' are not good things for healthy folks to indulge in. They create unrest, dissatisfaction and often times discord, all of which have a tendency to undermine an otherwise healthy constitution."

We glean the following items from the latest bulletin of the Division of Militia Affairs, War Department:

The Ordnance Department has prepared drawings which show the alterations necessary to convert arm racks, model 1908, Colt's revolver, caliber .38, and arm racks, model 1908, for .30 caliber and Colt's revolver, caliber .38, into arm racks that will receive the new caliber .45 automatic pistol which is now being issued to all of the Organized Militia. The necessary drawings together with the new parts required may be issued as a charge against funds appropriated under Section 1661, Revised Statutes, at a cost of $7.70 for each revolver arm rack, model 1908, and $2.03 for each rifle and revolver arm rack, model 1908. The alterations can be readily made by the States without shipping the arm racks to an arsenal.

The new tentative Cavalry Drill Regulations are now in the hands of the printer. When ready for issue they may be obtained by the Organized Militia like other government publications but they do not supersede the old Cavalry Drill Regulations which remain the authorized drill book for the use of the cavalry of the Organized Militia.

The Chief of Engineers has under consideration new reconnaissance equipment for issue to the service. The new equipment, if approved, will be considerably reduced from that prescribed at present. No further issues of the old type equipment will be made pending adoption of the new type, with the exception of watch compasses, which are available for issue at an approximate cost of $1.50 each. The Adjutant General of the several States will be advised upon approval of the new equipment, and information will also be furnished as to the articles included therein. (D. M. A. 45112).

The present edition of the Field Service Regulations is exhausted. These regulations are now being revised, and it will be several months before the revised edition will be ready for issue. (D. M. A. 44518).

Some confusion has arisen in regard to the deposits of money made by disbursing officers, on account of refundments of over-payments, or disallowances, and deposits of unexpended balances, and it is requested that the following instructions be carefully read and observed in future:

Every deposit of funds made by disbursing officers of the Organized Militia must be with the Treasurer of the United States. In the case of refundments or over-payments, or disallowances, the amount conceded must be deposited to the personal credit of the disbursing officer, and Form No. 1-N. B., should be used for this purpose. In explanation of the foregoing it may be stated that funds deposited in this manner, and marked "to the personal credit of the disbursing officer," are covered back into the appropriation under Section 1661, of the Revised Statutes, and credited to the allotment to the State. It will thus be seen that money refunded on account of disallowances, or over-payment, with the Treasurer of the United States, to the personal credit of the disbursing officer, is not included in the balance placed to this official credit, and a requisition of the Governor is necessary if it is desired that this amount shall be placed to the official credit of the disbursing officer.

In the case of a deposit of an unexpended balance, the funds may be handled in two different ways:

(a) In case a disbursing officer has funds left over after making cash payments, and desires to have the use of this money later, he may deposit the amount, as an unexpended balance to his official credit, with the Treasurer of the United States on Form No. 12-N. B. Funds so deposited are subject to the check of a disbursing officer and are not covered back into the allotment to the State.

(b) The second case, in regard to an unexpended balance, is where a disbursing officer is desirous of depositing the unexpended balance placed to his official credit, and have the same covered back to the allotment to the State. The amount should be deposited on Form No. 1-N. B., to his personal credit.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the only funds that may be deposited by a disbursing officer, and not covered back into the allotment to the State, are those on account of an unexpended balance, left from making cash payments, such funds being subject to his official check when properly deposited, on Form No. 12-N. B.

Disbursing officers are particularly warned in regard to making deposits that the proper forms should be used, and attention is again invited to the fact that funds deposited to their personal credit go back into the State's allotment, and funds deposited to their official credit, are still subject to their official check.

By command of MAJOR GENERAL DOUGHERTY,
DAVID J. DAVIS, Adjutant General.

Many discussions have taken place recently regarding the proposed reorganization of the Guard. In this connection, it has been stated that Colonel Eidell, of the First Infantry, entertains a favorable view of entering into the artillery arm of the service. The First Infantry, of course, has been a distinct organization in the National Guard for over half a century, and several general officers are emphatic in declaring that this infantry unit should not be disturbed. The proposed establishment of a cavalry force of the proportions essential for a divisional command is not by any means a new idea, as a necessity for this change was pointed out and advocated by Colonel Edward Morrell, while serving as Inspector General of the State several years ago. Colonel Morrell, while at the head of the Inspection Department, visited every unit in the State, a record, it is said, in the history of the Guard. At that time he determined to not only form the personal acquaintance of officers, but determined to gauge the efficiency of each company, troop and battery. It is stated that at that time Colonel Morrell made some strong recommendations in support of a practical and compact reorganization. Only several years ago it was reliably stated that Colonel Morrell would be pleased to give some thought to the establishment of a cavalry regiment, and that he might be prevailed upon to command such an organization. One prominent officer went so far as to suggest that the entire plan of reorganization might have been recalled by some of the officers of the regular establishment, and that the advanced step in this direction really emanated from the Keystone State. If this be true, Pennsylvania has again acted as a pace-setter for the Organized Militia of the nation.

One of the indefatigable workers in connection with the Meadville Armory was Major E. Lowry Humes, Judge Advocate, Second Brigade. Major Humes, with Major Gamble, devised ways and means of securing this property for the State. The Armory Board is to be congratulated upon having secured such a valuable administration building and site through the efforts of these two loyal officers.

An interesting feature in connection with the military social events of the present season in Philadelphia will be a reception and reunion, under the auspices of the veteran members of Company I, Third Infantry, to be held at Horticultural Hall, February 11. It is believed that this affair will surpass any of the kind ever held in the State. Some years ago, these receptions developed into national prominence, and in this case it is expected that distinguished military and naval officials, and prominent men of affairs of the State and Federal Government will be in attendance. The program under preparation will include features never before seen in Philadelphia. Nearly all of the members of the committee in charge have had experience in the former management of these affairs.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles T. Cresswell, who is the chairman of the Property Committee of the Board of Officers of the Third Infantry, it is stated, has consented to permit Captain Louis H. Schmidt, Commissary of the regiment, to place on the south wall of the officers' quarters a collection of fire-arms which should prove of decided interest to the members of the regiment, as well as the visiting public. Captain Schmidt has been recognized as one of the greatest collectors of fire-arms in the United States. His personal collection is said to be the finest in the world. The regiment is to be congratulated as the recipient of a gift so valuable and interesting. The donor is a well known officer, having served the State and nation with distinction.
